Sky B Airplane Bed by Circu

For the little one whose hero was Leadbottom in Disney's "Planes," we found the perfect bed. Can you imagine the dreams to be had in this crop duster replica biplane? Perhaps Dusty or Skipper Riley will make an appearance, or even Mayday or Sparky. Inspired by the movie, the bedmakers at Circu say this isn't just a bed, it's a place of creativity and imagination. With its giant yellow wings made of fiberglass, real rubber tires and red wooden propeller, the Sky B Airplane Bed is a painless way to make the transition from the crib. The suitcases allow children to climb up and down with ease and double as storage.

Embroidered Napkins by Coral and Tusk

We think you are going to love these 100-percent linen napkins by Coral and Tusk as much as we do. Designed by an Appalachian woman whose great-grandmother was a lacemaker and whose grandmother was a dollmaker, craft comes naturally to Stephanie Housley. With help from her husband, Chris Lacinak, Housley has grown Coral and Tusk from one product into many storytelling creations for every room of the house, offering pillows, artwork, table linens, dolls, accessories and more. They celebrate the theme of adornment and look to native cultures for inspiration. Housley loves to draw and embroider, skills she developed as a child on family trips to the Eastern Seaboard. We reap the benefit of Housley's creativity while reveling in her thoughtful textile designs.

Antony Tray by Windsor Smith for Arteriors

Arteriors describes this Antony Tray as "Renaissance ornament meets rustic craft." Made of hand-riveted copper, it was created with the repoussè method, which in French means "to push back." It's an Old World technique that creates a relief design by hammering or pressing the reverse side of a metal surface. (In fact, the Statue of Liberty was created in this manner.) With its generous size and beautiful antique silver finish, the Antony Tray is sure to steal attention at the dinner table. Equally so, it can double as a piece of art on your wall. Might we suggest hanging it in the dining room?
